It has been assumed that the α and β components of the α - β complex are identical in all tissues. However, the α - β complex in the liver is composed of two distinct components, α_1 and α_2 , which are both present in the liver. The α_1 component is the major component in the liver, while the α_2 component is the minor component. The α_1 component is the major component in the liver, while the α_2 component is the minor component.
